Description

Designed to meet the demands of daily supervision in the great canyons of Reunion Island, the harness has been created for professionals who regularly use the rope climbing technique. Like a harness, the protective breeches help to ensure that you sit comfortably when you're suspended for long periods in mid-air.

The movable thigh straps, which hold the subcutaneous tissue in place and are as quick to put on as they are to take off, relieve friction in the crotch during approach, exit or transition steps.

Used and tested for many years on numerous expeditions, this monitor sit harness, with its knife-holding straps and specially designed attachment for bags, has proved its effectiveness in both canyoning and caving.

The harness is fully adjustable.

It has two sheathed low-rope attachment points for efficient rope climbing. The waist, thigh and buttock straps can be adjusted using steel iron-on buckles.

Two sheathed gear loops.

3-year guarantee.
